

Value of Edmonton Coal As a Gas Producer

By Converting Coal Into Gas a Saving of Sixty Per Cent in Fuel May Be Saved

(From Journal Canadian Mining Institute.)

(By D. B. Dowling.)

The lignites are evidently outclassed by the true coals as steam producers, but there seems to be much hope that they will make a better showing in the coming revolution when the ability of a coal to furnish gas will mark its standing as a power producer. The gas producer and the gas engine will in time replace most of the steam plants when it is recognized that the increase in efficiency will reduce the consumption of coal by about sixty per cent. for the same amount of power. This is not at all visionary, but is borne out by many trials, and recently on a fairly large scale by the U. S. Geological Survey at St. Louis, where many coals were tested in both steam and producer gas plants with capacities of two hundred and fifty horse power.

Although our Canadian coals were not included in these trials, a series is selected that can be compared with reasonable limits with those that are obtainable in the provinces of Manitoba, Saskatchewan, and Alberta. The selections are made from the preliminary results published in Bull. 261, U. S. Geol. Surv. with the object of showing that even the poorest lignite has as a coal producer a value equal in power to production to that of good steam coal when used in the steam plant.

The relative value of the western coal varies from that of the test as found in the mountains to the poorest lignite of the eastern plains.

The trials with both gas and steam were confined to bituminous coals and lignites, so that our semi-anthracites which are of great value as steam producers are not included.

1. Coal—W. Virginia, No. 12.—This coal has a fuel ratio 4.13 which classifies it as harder than Crown's Nest but softer than Canmore.

To produce 1 electrical h.p. per hour required 3.58 lbs.—3.52 dry coal.

2. Coal—W. Virginia No. 4.—Fuel ratio 2.14, similar to softest coal in the mountains, and about the same analysis as a seam near Pincher Creek, Alberta.

To produce one electrical h.p. per hour—3.71 lbs. coal—3.62 dry coal.

3. Lignite Coal—Alabama No. 2.—This coal is sufficiently like the Lehigh bridge coal for comparison, but is very high in ash.

An Open Verdict

IN BUCKINGHAM INQUEST.

Jury Attached Blame to No One for Death of Detective Frederick Warner.

(Bulletin Special)

Buckingham, Que., Oct. 21.—"We find that the deceased died in Buckingham October 15, 1906 from blood poisoning caused by a bullet wound inflicted on him from a firearm on October 8th during a riot in which more than a hundred took part."

After sitting three days hearing the evidence of twenty-five witnesses and deliberating for one hour and three-quarters the jury empaneled by Coroner Fountaine returned the foregoing verdict here Saturday afternoon, in connection with the death of Detective Frederick Warner.

Crown Prosecutor Guerin stated this evening that Attorney General Gouin had instructed him to proceed with a double inquest touching the deaths of Belanger and Theriault as soon as possible.

Mr. Guerin left for Montreal tonight but will come back to Buckingham on Monday or Tuesday, when the bodies will be exhumed and viewed. Dr. Fountaine has declined to act as coroner again and either Coroner McMahon or Deputy Coroner Byron of Montreal will act. Meanwhile matters will be allowed to remain as they are both sides agreeing to suspend action until after the second suspended inquest.

The "open" verdict was rather unexpected in view of the sensational evidence that was adduced during the inquiry. The result of the Warner inquest has rendered imperative searching investigations in the cases of Belanger and Theriault.

ALL IMPERIALISTS

The following is from an interview obtained by the Daily Express of London, England, with the Minister of the Interior for Canada, and widely copied by the Canadian press:

"We are all Imperialists in Canada," said Mr. Oliver. "The existence of the British Empire is a great practical advantage to us, and we might say, as the Americans did in their declaration of independence, that our freedom is dependent upon that factor."

"Canadians are very glad indeed that the trade preferences we are able to show to Great Britain is looked on as satisfactory in this country, but if in our own interests we should in the future find it necessary to protect our ranchers, then we hope the English people will not be displeased."

"There is a keen affection for the Mother Country in Canada, but I would not emphasize it. Among those who were born in England and who are now Canadians the tie of sentiment is very strong, but we rely on the fact, but on argument which appeal to every practical mind for the continuance of our present cordial relations with Great Britain."

"During the Boer War you had an illustration of our attitude. It did not matter to us whether the Boers won or not, but we sent Canadians to fight for you, chiefly because it was recognized as a case of 'The Empire—right or wrong.'"

"We know that under the British flag there is no personal freedom, but we exist such as are possible nowhere else, and it is to our advantage to stick to the Empire and assist you in case of need."

BIG COAL FIND.

Kootenay Formations Traced Nearly to the Yellow Head Pass.

Ottawa, Oct. 18.—Very valuable discoveries of bituminous coal have lately been made on the first stream about half a mile west of the limestone of the Bighorn range in the Canadian Rockies. The find was made by the geological survey, in the person of their chief coal representative, Mr. D. B. Dowling. Exactly how valuable these discoveries may prove to be at the present, is impossible to say, and Mr. Dowling is naturally reticent on the subject, but there is no doubt that he has been able to trace bituminous deposits for some distance further north. Mr. Dowling knows the geology of the foothills perhaps better than any other living person, and has been long under the impression that the coal deposits are by no means confined to the Costigan basin. The Rocky Mountain coal fields are acknowledged to be one of the chief assets of the Dominion, but until complete analyses have been made by the seams discovered by Mr. Dowling, no one can have any idea how valuable these assets may prove to be. Situated as these deposits are, in a north and south belt, they are available for the wants of railway power production. The belts already crossed by both branches of the C. P. R. are producing a large tonnage of coal. The geological survey has been busily mapping and tracing out these areas and will shortly issue a series of four map sheets, illustrating that portion crossed by the main line. The suggested building of a railway or railways through the Yellowhead pass has called for a coal supply of a better grade than the lignites to be obtained in the Edmonton district, and for this reason Mr. Dowling was commissioned to trace the formation bearing the better grade of coal as far north as possible. It was previously believed that the Kootenay formation in which the coal seams of Fernie, Cammore and Bankhead are found, did not reach the Saskatchewan, but Mr. Dowling has now traced these formations past the Brazeau river to within seventy miles of the Yellowhead pass.

The following brief report has been received by the director of the survey from Mr. Dowling:—

"The coal basins of the Rocky Mountains are as a rule not in continuous strips, but depend on the foldings of the mountains, and these are occasionally interrupted. The Cascade basin has been traced to within fourteen miles of the Saskatchewan. Between the Red Deer river and the Clearwater a section of the measures gives 34 seams of which 15 are over 4 1/2 feet in thickness, and the workable coal amounts to 85 feet. Between the Saskatchewan and Brazeau rivers, an outer range of mountains called the Bighorn range, brings up the coal measures again, and on the south side of the Saskatchewan is what may be called the foothills. These coal measures reach the surface and are exposed in a small ravine rising to the river, opposite the limestone range. In this locality three streams were discovered, in what is evidently the top of the formations, and one seam is of workable thickness, the upper two being about two feet only. The largest seam has five feet of good, clean coal, overlaid by shale about five feet thick, above which is three feet of good coal. This seam may possibly, when worked, run into a thick seam as the shale banks often are traceable, first dirty coal and then clean coal, and the reverse. On the north side of the river they lifted much higher and the coal measures underlie at no great depth all the interval between the Bighorn range and the main Rockies. In this the Bighorn river cuts through and exposes a great number of seams, but most of these were crushed and very dirty.

The best exposures, however, were found farther north on streams breaking through the Bighorn range in the vicinity of the Brazeau river. There the seams observed on the Saskatchewan were also found, but it was with a good deal of satisfaction that a 16-foot seam was unearthed. The coals have not been analysed as yet, but the trials in an open fire show that they are not a true anthracite, as they burn with a luminous flame, with some smoke and coke. They may be roughly classed as seam coal of Fernie and the anthracite coal of Cammore, and should be of excellent value for the railway use. The coals are found again on the north side of the Brazeau and as the formations are continuous, they occur on the latter stream, though the mantle of river deposit and drift conceal them from the casual observer. Our efforts are necessarily limited to the earlier exposures, owing to limited time and laborers."

APARTMENT HOUSES.

Two Metropolitan-Styled Residences Proposed for the West End—Plans will Ready.

Two modern apartment houses are contemplated by local men to furnish homes on the metropolitan plan in Edmonton. The people who propose building are Mr. Gariepy, of Gariepy & Leonard, and Mr. Foster, of the B. C. fruit exchange.

J. H. Gariepy has plans prepared for a modern apartment house, to be built in the west end, which will mark a new departure in the building line in Edmonton.

It is to be built on Lot 59, Block 4, which is just a few doors south of Jasper on Fifth street. The plans call for a building 45,000 feet high. Each flat will be divided down the middle by a main hall-way and the suites to the right and left will each form an apartment of seven rooms including bath room, pantry, kitchen, etc. The basement is to have a steam heating plant, laundry, tenants' cellars, and all the requirements of a modern apartment house.

Mr. Gariepy proposed to build this flat, but owing to the scarcity of material will probably not be able to get the work done. However, tenders will be called for before the first of the year and an early start made next spring. Mr. Degendorfer is the architect. The building will cost $2,500.

Mr. Foster's plans call for a $17,000 building to be built on Fourteenth St., or thereabouts, but so far he has not definitely selected his site, although the plans are all prepared and the contracts let.

SERIOUS ACCIDENT.

Strathcona Plaindealer: Mr. David Alexander, who lives in the Hubert addition of Strathcona met with a painful accident on Saturday night last which might have proved fatal, and was the direct result of the wild reckless driving of some drunken rascal as yet unknown. Mr. Alexander had been out at Mr. Malcolm Groat's place west of Edmonton and was returning home about 10 o'clock at night in his buggy. It was a very dark night and the only lights visible made the darkness more black. He heard the noise of a galloping horse and rig coming behind him, and the wild exclamations of the driver and shouted back to warn him of his presence on the road. Suddenly the pursuing horse dashed into his rig, and his own beast becoming affrighted ran away and smashed the buggy, eventually cleared the shafts and has not yet been recovered.

Mr. Alexander was thrown out, kicked in the chest and otherwise bruised and battered. The kick in the chest made him unconscious for a time. When at last he recovered consciousness he called for help, which soon came from the neighboring houses, and he was cared for. The police were telephoned for and soon arrived with a livery rig and took him to the station. From there he got another livery and was driven to his home, where he has since been confined. Fortunately he does not believe that any of his injuries are permanent but that he will recover from them. Up to last evening his horse had not been found. The identity of the man whose recklessness caused the trouble remains a mystery as he had not the decency to come back and assist his victim.

THE POINT TO BE CONSIDERED

The street railway estimates prepared by the commissioners, besides providing the ability of the city to finance the proposition afford a definite basis for the consideration of the question as to whether or not the time has come for undertaking the enterprise.

It is one thing to know that the city can afford to build a street railway, but it is quite a different question as to whether the prospective business would justify the investment. This is the question now before the council and the ratepayers generally and is the question which must decide whether or not the system be gone on with in the immediate future.

The essential question is not whether the system would cost little money or much money as long as the cost be within the financial ability of the city, but whether or not the business of the enterprise will bear the expense of the enterprise, whether its cost be great or little. That the enterprise would involve a heavy investment is true but this is in itself no argument against making the investment. The paying investments are usually the larger investments and if the proportion between cost and earning power be right, the larger the investment the better the investment.

CANADA AND NEWFOUNDLAND

It has been suggested that dissatisfaction with the modus vivendi may incline the Newfoundlanders more favorably toward the question of joining their island to the Dominion.

This may be a good reason why the Newfoundlanders should desire to join the Dominion but it is by no means so good a reason why the Dominion should favor their doing so.

The fisheries of Newfoundland are unquestionably very valuable but they have been productive of trouble as well as dividends and there is no apparent reason for supposing that the former production is likely either to cease or to diminish in the near future. If the present temper of the Newfoundlanders is to be taken as reflecting in any measure their attitude in the future the partnership would hold the promise of involving trouble to Canada which might easily offset any advantages she would derive from the union.

However this may be the teaching of the present is that of the past, that any proposal should come from Newfoundland rather than from Canada. The present incident illustrates well that Canada has less to expect from such union than Newfoundland and therefore less reason to take the initiative. More than this, for Canada to do so would probably defeat the end in view unless Canada were prepared to sacrifice her own interests for the well-being of the island. If Newfoundland approached the Dominion seeking admission it might be made a stipulation of acceding to the request that the fisheries question be first settled and settled beyond the chances of reversion. But for Canada to approach Newfoundland with a proposal for a union in one hand and a condition of such union in the other would probably occasion another outbreak of the insular sentiment which the Newfoundlanders appear to mistake for independence and the negotiations would reach a speedy culmination. The rules of propriety and the path of peace point in the same direction that the party which needs the union is the party to propose the union.

Illustrative of the international question in which Canada might become tangled through an alliance with the island while its fisheries interests are still unsettled the following review of the present mix-up and of the settlement of the former trouble with the French Government is in place. The review is from the Ottawa Free Press:

"The present dispute which has set the Newfoundlanders by the ears is the result of the retaliatory action of the Government of the colony when Congress refused to ratify the Bond-Hay treaty under which, for a good price, fresh fish from Newfoundland were to be admitted into the United States on more favorable tariff terms. Congress was so influenced in so doing by the uproar which was made by the New England fishermen who feared the competition of the Newfoundland 'bankers' both obtaining their fish from the same 'grounds'."

"Indignant at being thrown down the Newfoundland Government decided to follow somewhat similar tactics which had been so successfully carried out with regard to the French fishery."

"In the latter case to offset the bounty paid by the French Government for dried fish caught and brought across the Atlantic in French bottoms and sold in competition with unbonused Newfoundland fish in the Mediterranean market, the Newfoundland Government placed restrictions in the way of the Frenchmen getting the absolute necessary bait. The result has been that the French fishery has been practically wiped out, and instead of an enormous fleet of fishing vessels crossing the Atlantic every year, there are now very few."

"In the case of the United States the Newfoundland Government passed a law that the hitherto large sale of herring to American fishermen by Newfoundland fishermen must also be done by the Newfoundland fishermen. The law hit both ways and there was some rumbling from the Newfoundland fishermen but the greatest kick, of course, came from the Americans."

"Washington took up the matter with Downing Street and the latter tried to persuade the Colonists to be more lenient. Apparently they failed and fearing serious international trouble, the dispute has been temporarily patched up, the Americans, apparently getting all they demanded."

"And now there are 'doin's' in St. John's."

THE advent of the Oxford Hot Water Boiler has given great depth for accumulated ashes, and, when ordered, is fitted with an ash sifter which separates the good coal from the dead ashes, thus, without any extra trouble, saving much fuel that is ordinarily thrown away.

Oxford
Hot Water
Boiler

The diameter of the fire-pot is greater at the top than at the bottom, preventing an accumulation of ashes around the most active part of the boiler.

The triangular revolving grate is hollow, allowing immense air space without permitting five coals to drop through. Dead ashes, clinkers, etc., are sharply cut off by a turn of the grate. The whole contents of the grate are dumped by a few extra turns.

We would like to tell you more about the Oxford Hot Water Boiler. Will you write for our book? It's free. 1007

A Range That
Burns All the Coal

MOST likely you have been throwing away good coal every day without knowing it. Coal that is only partially burned in the fire-box.

Because, with the ordinary range draft, the air current only strikes part of the fire.

Usually the damper door on such a range is situated at one end of the fire-box, which makes your fire hot at the draft end and cold at the other end.

Or the damper is perhaps on the left side of the stove, which makes an uneven fire for the same reason.

You are not only losing fuel, but your cooking and baking is unsatisfactory, for you cannot get a uniform heat.

Now, the draft in a Monarch Range is entirely different.

Instead of one damper door, there are two, one in each end of the fire-box.

These form a double or Duplex Draft, and both are regulated by the same handle.

So you get two direct currents of air at the same time, and your fire burns smoothly and evenly.

You open both drafts simultaneously and shut them off the same way.

The draft striking the fire from both directions consumes all the fuel, and gives you all the heating power from the coal.

When you empty the ash-pan in a Monarch Range, you are throwing away ashes—and ashes only—not coal.

And in addition to this, the Monarch is constructed of Steel and Malleable Iron, which can be riveted so tight and solid that no air-leaks can possibly happen as they do in cast iron ranges.

The top is Malleable Iron, polished and bright. You can keep it clean without mearning your range with blacking which gets on the cooking vessels, to make more work for you.

A $1.00 Cook Book Free

The Monarch Cook Book, written by Mrs. Helen M. Thomas, an acknowledged authority on domestic science is a Real Book, not a cheap circular. Its pages bound in cloth on board covers—a book that would cost $2.00 at the book stores.

It contains 200 recipes, many of them new, all simple, easy to make and inexpensive. This practical menu for the whole year and many valuable hints on diet and marketing. You can get it without cost if you intend buying a range or cook stove within a year.

HOW TO GET IT. Cut out this advertisement, mail it to the Malleable Iron Range Company, Denver, Colo., and tell them within (stating month if possible) you expect to buy and you will receive this valuable book free. As the edition is limited, write now.

MR. GREENWOOD.
Canadian Magazine.

Mr. Hamar Greenwood, member of the British House of Commons for the ancient city of York, has been visiting Canada after an absence of eleven years. He went away a penniless youth; he returns Parliament Secretary to the Under-Secretary of the Colonial Office in his own humorous way he describes himself as Lay Archbishop of York and the political successor of Julius Caesar. He ascribes his success in Great Britain to the fact that he was born in Canada, where each youth is taught that no matter how humble his origin, his future is in his own hands. "Had I been born in England, I would have been an emigrant to Canada; having been born in Canada, I am able to make a success in England."

Mr. Greenwood began as a temperance lecturer in Great Britain, got further experience in lecturing on Canada, and in stump speaking for the Liberal Party. The Liberals in the city of York heard his musical voice, his pithy sentences and his robust humor, and desired him for their own. With true Canadian modesty he accepted the first offer, herein differing from his predecessor Julius Caesar.

STUDYING THE MICROBES.

Cairo, Egypt, Oct. 13.—"All Central Africa is going to be made perfectly habitable for the white man. Its agricultural, industrial and commercial resources will become available. The Nile and its tributaries will team with the commerce of a numerous and happy people."

Mr. Henry S. Wellcome, who made this statement, is the well known American chemist and bacteriologist of London.

Six years ago Mr. Wellcome went out to the Sudan.

"Disease was rampant," he said. "People live stock and growing crops were perishing almost without a finger lifted to stay the calamity. I was granted permission to found what has been named the Wellcome Research Laboratories, which were accommodated in five rooms of the east wing of the Gordon Memorial college at Khartoum. The fitting of these laboratories with every modern appliance and apparatus was completed four years ago, and Dr. Andrew Balfour, a man of great experience in combating tropical diseases, was made director. Later, Dr. William Beam, of America, an authority on economic chemistry was put in charge of the work since its formation has stamped out malaria in the Sudan by exterminating the mosquito."

Small-pox has also been exterminated. The medical staff of the British army had made this possible by establishing a rule and practice of vaccination that knew not the conscientious objector. The stubbornest foe that faces the specialist is the sleeping sickness. It is spread by the tsetse fly, which breeds in vast numbers in Central Africa and which has come northward along Stanley's route from the Congo and Uganda, where it swept away some 80,000 people and wrought havoc among the cattle, goats and donkeys. The study of this disease like that of cancer, is in its infancy; but an immense fund of interesting facts is accumulating, and I foresee the time when the scourge will be conquered."

A FLOATING LABORATORY.

Mr. Wellcome has been presented with one of Gordon's old steamers by the Sudanese government and he will at once convert it into the first complete floating laboratory ever established. The boat will ply on the shallow branches of the Nile south of Khartoum, carrying a staff of scientists, who will make frequent landings to study the disorders of the tribes and their animals, and to collect or photograph specimens of biting fleas, mosquitoes, ticks and beetles. Where possible the insects will be preserved but, owing to the fact that they may be studied not only in the stationary laboratories at Khartoum, but in the foremost laboratories of Germany, America and England. Thus the war on tropical pests is becoming a unified affair on behalf of the whole of mankind. Several of the students of the Carnegie-endowed schools in Scotland will go out to the Sudan this winter to work with Dr. Balfour and Beam at Khartoum and further south.

The One Right Steel Plate Range

Until we found out just the right way to use asbestos to keep the heat in a cooking range where it must cook the food instead of cooking the cook, every steel-plate range kept the kitchen broiling-hot. This range is a cool range—the top shield and lining is thick asbestos, so the heat stays inside the range and keeps even evenly hot. Food is better cooked, quicker cooked and cooked for less fuel-cost.

their style and making are pretty much an experiment.
That is why so many gentlemen

The design of the Semi-ready dress suit is the work of a sartorial artist of the highest rank.
The suits are tailored by men who do nothing else
—they are specialists in the tailoring of dress clothes.

Semi-ready dress clothes are made of light-weight unfinished worsteds. The coat is delicately designed, as the parts are smaller than in any other style. The balance and lines are such as to show the figure at its best. The shoulders are broad yet natural form.

The Semi-ready dress suit is made with a longer lapel, rolling to within two and a half inches of the waist, with considerable convex on crease, and a defined point at bottom of lapel instead of the usual harsh point.

On account of the carefully designed lines, the coat adheres closely to the
sets smoothly over the hips.

The skirts are longer, tapering towards the bottom with slightly rounded corners.
The illustration shows these lines.

If you wear a dress suit at all, it should be correct in style and tailoring.
We would like to show you how sumptuous the Semi-ready dress suit and tuxedo are. Will you call in?

HOME RULE QUESTION.

Present Standing Outlined by Great Irish Leader.

I gladly accept the invitation to state the present political and parliamentary position of the Home Rule cause in the columns of a Canadian journal as Canadian opinion is one of the factors which will help in the near and satisfactory solution of the question.

For several years the leaders of the Irish movement have had to consider what would be the position of the cause when a Liberal majority was again returned to power. And there came gradually over the inner mind of the party a certain change of tactics. In the olden days the fundamental idea of our tactics was that the Irish vote should hold the balance of power. And that was a wise and necessary policy in the days when both the British political parties were opposed to us and when it was necessary to force the question of Home Rule but the incorporation of the Liberal as an integral part of the Liberal programme transformed the situation. There might be here and there a desertion or a weakening but the Liberal party in England has never taken up a reform without persevering in its advocacy until it was finally granted; and I have never regarded anything approaching to a wholesale or even a partial abandonment of Home Rule by the British Liberal party as within the bounds of political possibilities or even contemplation.

But the adoption of a programme and the carrying of it into legislation are of course two different things; and the position created by the failure of the two attempts of Gladstone to carry Home Rule, imposed upon the Irish leaders the duty of considering whether a change of ideas and tactics was not necessary. And the first conclusion came to years ago though of course not then stated, was that the old position of an Irish party holding the balance of power was not suitable to the new circumstances. A British ministry, holding office by the Irish vote and dependent entirely on that vote, was no the ministry which could carry a Home Rule measure against the certain opposition of the House of Lords and against the still remaining prejudices and ignorance of Irish conditions among the English people. It was therefore believed for years that for the sake of Ireland it was desirable that there should be a Liberal majority strong enough and big enough to be able to declare that it was not dependent on the Irish vote. Such a ministry would create an entirely new situation; it would make clear that the adoption of Home Rule by the administration was not the adoption of a policy it did not believe in for the simple purpose of obtaining votes and keeping power but the adoption of a policy believed honestly to be as necessary for the good of England as for the good of Ireland, which considerations led to this first great principle in our tactics that the greater the Liberal majority the better for Ireland. Or in put the same idea in somewhat different language, there could be no Liberal majority too big to carry Home Rule.

Here the objection will suggest itself that a Liberal administration, capable of existing without the Irish vote, might well be tempted to abandon Home Rule. Home Rule is not a very paying cry in Irish politics and it might be urged by those taking up this line of objection. Two ministries have already been broken in the attempt to carry Home Rule; and through its adoption of Home Rule, the Liberal party has been out of power for nearly twenty years. The first answer to this line of argument I have already given; I do not believe in the possibility of the British Liberal party ever abandoning a great reform once it has taken it up. And I believe it the less in the case of Home Rule because I know that the Liberal leaders are just as concerned as any Home Ruler like myself is, that Home Rule is as necessary for England and for the empire as for Ireland. To abandon Home Rule would then be a betrayal, not merely of the interests of Ireland but of the interests of England and of the empire as English Liberals understand these interests.

But suppose the impossible case of a Liberal ministry base enough and stupid enough to think that it could abandon Home Rule, could it do so? I answer in an emphatic negative. What would happen at once? The Irish party can be a dangerous enemy as well as a loyal friend, and it knows no mercy for those who betray the cause of Ireland. The immediate effect of such an abandonment of Home Rule as I am considering would, of course, be an attack on the Liberal government by the Irish party. Eighty-two men, attacking a government is always formidable, but the eighty-two men attacking a ministry that had betrayed its own principle is more formidable still. But the 82 Irishmen would not be alone. There are 51 Labor members in the House, every one of whom is as deeply committed to Home Rule as the Irishmen, and they would certainly join in the attack upon the government. It may be true that the present huge majority which the Liberal party enjoys would beat in the lobbies even a combination so formidable; but everybody who knows anything of the House of Commons knows that when a majority however great begins to get smaller, its days are numbered. The beginning of the end has come. The end may be postponed, but parliamentary majorities are pretty rapidly. Mr. Balfour had a majority in the House of Commons up to the very day he resigned office, but for two years that majority had been impotent and Mr. Balfour, relying upon it, after it had ceased to be homogeneous, brought himself overwhelming disaster.

And thus I come to the second proposition which underlies our present policy. The first is, as I have said, that no Liberal majority could be too great to carry Home Rule.

The second is, that no Liberal majority could be so big as to be able to drop Home Rule.

When, therefore, the last general election resulted in such a tremendous majority for the Liberal party, all sane Irishmen were glad, and they saw that at last there was a good prospect of Home Rule being carried within a comparatively short time. They were further encouraged by the fact that the prime minister and leader of the Liberal party was a man whose adhesion to their cause neither time nor defeat nor the weakening of others close to him had been able to destroy or weaken; they knew he was an honest, a frank and a courageous statesman, and they knew that intellectually as well as morally he was bound by his convictions to do his best to carry Home Rule.

"Why, then, has not a Home Rule yet been proposed?" I may be asked. The answer is quite simple. It was impossible to put a pistol to the head of the government and ask them to at the time being, of politicians. For a task so difficult and so gigantic as that of Home Rule. They had not been more than a few weeks in office when the general election came, and a general election, as everybody knows, absorbs the whole attention, for the time being, of politicians. The general election was only when the ministers had to meet Parliament. There wasn't the time, even if there had been the desire, to prepare a Home Rule bill for the Houses of Parliament. But even if there had been time to propose a Home Rule bill in the very first session of the new Parliament, it would have been folly for the Irish party to have asked and for the government to have consented to a plan. It would have invited the destruction not only of the government but of their Irish cause. Every Liberal in England would have called out in protest at this taking up of Home Rule before an attempt had been made to deal with some questions of Irish life, which cried out for immediate settlement and which could be as easily and immediately dealt with. The Trades Unionists—indeed every working man in England in fact—had his power for organizing himself for protection against low wages and long hours—menace, as the famous Taff Vale decision, which, as is known, subjected trades unions funds to attack. The school question, which had sent hundreds of respectable men to prison, cried out for settlement. Finally, there must necessarily be a period of education, and of reflection, of growing cohesion in the ranks of a new Parliament before a question so difficult as Home Rule could be tackled. It was then with the full assent of the Irish party that the proposal of a Home Rule measure was postponed to the second session of the new Parliament.

But it is not the business of the Irish party to allow any session of Parliament to pass without getting something for their country, and the session which is still going on has already been remarkable for one great act of justice to Ireland; the Laborers' Act which has placed at the disposal of Irish local bodies a large sum of money for the building of laborers' cottages and the improvement of the conditions of that long suffering class. In addition the government have helped the Irish party to pass through several stages of measures for the improvement of the position of town tenements. And, finally, the Government have appointed two commissions to inquire into two of the most urgent of Irish questions, the position of Trinity College and the position of the congested districts. The latter commission, which deals with one of the most pressing of our demands—namely, more money and more power to deal with those miserable settlements on the western shores of Ireland, where men packed like sardines on patches of four acres, live side by side with miles of lands, fertile land given over to grazing and desolate of people. The commission to inquire into that problem has as its chairman Vice-roy of Ireland under the last Tory government. Lord Dudley, I may add, is one of the long list of Unionist statesmen whose acquaintance with the conditions of Irish life has converted from an enemy into a friend of extended self-government. This then has been the situation up to the present. Next February we shall, according to all probability, see the measure for the new government for Ireland introduced by Mr. Bryce. Nobody expects that the measure will put the final coping stone on the fabric of Irish self-government; but everybody expects that it will lay the foundations broad and deep; and that it will be easy for the Irish people, by good sense, by self-control, by union, to build on sure foundations a self-government as true and beneficent as that which has transformed the Canada of rebellion and discontent and disunion into the prosperous, free, loyal and united country it is today.

The public school concert in aid of the piano fund will be held this week on Wednesday evening in the Thistle rink. The teachers and pupils are to be congratulated in obtaining such famous artists as Harold Jarvis and Wallace Graham. Of Mr. Jarvis the Manitoba Free Press says: "It would be folly at this date to discuss the quality of his voice or his standing as an artist. A few years ago he sang his way into the hearts of the west and each visit has added to the long list of admirers and friends. He devotes a portion of every program to the songs that are beloved by the masses of the people, songs of exquisite melody and of which the words are familiar to every one."

The Westminster Abbey choir appear this evening in the Edmonton opera house. The choir comprises twelve singers, and their program will include solos, trios and choruses. A special feature is the boy chorists—four young lads from nine to twelve years of age who give a splendid section of nursery songs. Other features will be the old English ballads by Miss Marie Hooten, contralto, Edward Brancorini, tenor, and musical sketches by Mr. Harry Ivimey. The choir is chosen from those who sang at the coronation services of King Edward in the famous abbey at Westminster.

PUBLIC SCHOOL CONCERT.

Harold Jarvis and Walter Graham appear in the Thistle rink on Wednesday October 24, under the auspices of the public schools. The concert is in aid of the piano fund and is worthy of the patronage of the public. Mr. Jarvis is equally effective whether he sings opera or oratorio, the new songs of Old England or the stirring ballads of Bonnie Scotland. His voice is a robust tenor of exquisite tone production and enunciation.

Wallace Graham is an elocutionist without rant or noise, and free from any objection. He comes from Brandon where he is engaged in teaching elocution in the Brandon College.

DR. BRAITHWAITE ELECTED.

Dr. Wilson today received the following telegram from Dr. Brett announcing that by ballot voted he medical council of Alberta in session at Calgary had unanimously sustained the registrar's decision declaring Dr. Braithwaite elected to the council. Dr. Lafferty, registrar, and Dr. Braithwaite abstained from voting.

THE INCINERATOR.

Edmonton, Alta. Oct. 20, 1906.

To the Editor:
Dear Sir:—While naturally regretting that the council did not accept my offer for the supply of the incinerator manufactured by Messrs. Heenan & Froude, Ltd., yet I trust that their decision may be justified by the results. I, however, maintain that it is impossible to thoroughly destroy refuse by burning except at a high temperature.

There are certain gases given off in the process of cooking and burning which can only be destroyed thoroughly by submitting them to such a temperature as can only be produced by a forced draught, and I positively state that the only thorough test as to the "sanitary manner" in which the refuse is destroyed is by taking frequent analyses of the flue gases before they enter the smoke stack. If these analyses do not show freedom from carbon and other deleterious gases then it is evident that they are only carried up the chimney to fall again by their own gravitation on the surrounding neighborhood.

I am, dear sir,
Yours faithfully,
RICHARD A. TAUNTON.
